Commencer d'être psychanalyste, tout le monde le sait, ça commence à la fin d'une analyse. Il n'y a qu'à prendre ça comme ça nous est donné si nous voulons saisir quelque chose, il faut partir de là, de ce point qui est dans la psychanalyse reçu de tous.

To begin being a psychoanalyst, as everyone knows, begins at the end of an analysis. We can only take this as it is given to us, if we want to grasp anything at all: that's where we have to start, from this point we all share in psychoanalysis.

—Jacques Lacan, Seminar XV, Lacte psychanalytique, January 10, 1968

Presentation of Après-Coup Formation Program

Paola Mieli

Friday, September 17, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Formation in psychoanalysis differs from that of other clinical practices and cannot be reduced to a mere professional training nor to an academic program of studies. Après-Coup grounds its own Formation Program on this premise, focusing on the temporality of the analytical act, its uniqueness, and its transmission. Analysis, supervision, courses, seminars, active participation, cartels, and the difference between the procedure concluding the Après-Coup program and the passé will be discussed.

MEETING PLACE: The School of Visual Arts, 214 East 21st Street, New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

REGISTRATION: Attendance is free.

Foundations of Psychoanalysis

A SERIES OF PRESENTATIONS

This series is designed to introduce and study some of the fundamental concepts of psychoanalysis with particular focus on Lacan's understanding of clinical practice. It is addressed to all those interested in psychoanalysis, independent of level of study and orientation.

The Graph of Desire

Guillermina Diaz

Friday, September 24, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Among the models and schemas Lacan integrated into all his teaching, the graph of desire, developed between the years 1957 and '60, would prove to be particularly central. We will reexamine how Lacan plots the elements needed to situate desire and the subject as he conceives them at this moment in his work.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Seminar V, Les formations de l'inconscient: classes March 26 and June 11, '58; Écrits: "The Subversion of the Subject and the Dialectic of Desire," 1960.

The Id and the Act

Claude Rabant

Friday October 29th, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

What is the interest in returning today to Freud's notion of the Id? Following Freud's elaboration of it throughout his work, we will explore the different facets of its conceptualization and its implication for the analytic act.

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: The Ego and the Id, 1923.

☛ Claude Rabant will hold a Workshop on this topic on Saturday, October 30, 10:30 AM–2:00 PM, at the same location.

REGISTRATION FOR THE WORKSHOP: Attendance is free for members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Saturday Workshop attendance for others is $50; for students with ID, $20.

The Superego

Jean-Michel Vives

Friday, December 17, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Freud consolidates his view of the superego in his 1923 The Ego and the Id; yet the clinical-theoretical elements it comprises are present from the very beginnings of his theorization. We will follow Freud's path step by step and explore its clinical implications.

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: "On Narcissism: An Introduction," 1914; Group Psychology and the Analysis of the Ego, 1921; The Ego and the Id, 1923.

☛ Jean-Michel Vives will hold a Workshop on this topic on Saturday, December 18, 2010, from 10:30 AM to 2:00 PM, at the same location.

REGISTRATION FOR THE WORKSHOP: Attendance is free for members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Saturday Workshop attendance for others is $50; for students with ID, $20.

On Hate

Paola Mieli

Friday, January 7, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Freud approaches hate from the perspective of the vicissitudes of the drive, Lacan from what is most proper to the ex-sistence of the speaking being. Where to situate hate? How to understand its function, its relation to the act?

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: "Drives and Their Vicissitudes," 1915; "Negation," 1924.

The Psychoanalytic Act

Adriana Passini

Friday, January 28, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:30 PM

What is the essence of the psychoanalytic act? Could it be interpretation, transference? What constitutes an act for an analyst? Referring to Lacan's seminar on the psychoanalytic act, we will study how act, speech, and truth are knotted together at the end of an analysis.

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: The Psychopathology of Everyday Life, ch. 1: "The forgetting of proper names," 1901. J. Lacan: Seminar XV, Lacte psychanalytique, 1967/68.

The Subject: Beyond the Opposition Individual/Collective

Erik Porge

Friday, February 18, 2011 · 6:30 PM– 9:00 PM

"The collective is nothing but the subject of the individual," Lacan writes. The emergence of the subject overcomes the opposition between the individual and the collective. This emergence occurs in small groups, where the function of the 'un en plus' (one more) takes place. We'll follow Lacan's development of this idea, articulated in five moments of his teaching.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Écrits: "Logical Time and the Assertion of Anticipated Certainty," 1945; Autres écrits, 2001: "La psychiatrie anglaise et la guerre," "Le nombre treize et la forme logique de la suspicion."

MEETING PLACE: All Foundations of Psychoanalysis meetings will take place at the School of Visual Arts, 214 East 21st Street (between 2nd and 3rd Avenues), New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

REGISTRATION FOR THE FOUNDATIONS SERIES (not including Workshops): Attendance is free for all members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Attendance for others is $20 per session; for students with ID, $10 per session.

The Body in Language

Paula Vappereau Hochman

Friday, March 25, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

“What is the use of a body?” is the question put into play by the dynamic of narcissism. As the body both reads and reads itself, at once object and commentary, it passes from the imaginary other through the Other as the locus of speech. It is this passage that fails to occur in angst.

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: “On Narcissism: An Introduction,” 1914. Lewis Carroll: Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass.

How Do We “Read” a Picture?

Alain Vanier

Thursday, April 14, 2011 · 8:30 PM–10:30 PM

Beginning with various “readings” of Velazquez’s “Las Meninas” (Foucault, Lacan, Arasse) and of some other more recent paintings, we will consider what it means to “read” a picture. Are there as many readings as there are readers? If we accept the notion that we don’t just look at a picture but are also gazed at by it, then a picture also interprets us by making us see what we don’t see.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Seminar XIII, L’objet de la psychanalyse, 1965/66: classes May 4, 11, 18, and 25, 1966; Michel Foucault: The Order of Things, ch.1.

Identification and Symptom

Martin Winn

Friday, April 29, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Identification implies a fundamental mis-recognition that gives coherence and masks the lack. Considering that during the course of an analysis, an analysand may question, alter, and abandon the layers of identifications that have sustained him, what is the relationship between identification and symptom?

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Écrits: “The Mirror Stage as Formative of the I Function,” 1949; Seminar IX, L’identification, 1961/62: classes 12, 16, 19, 24, 26.

The Phantasm in the Vicissitudes of the Cure

Pura Cancina

Friday, May 13, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

In our earlier study of acting out and passage à l’acte we made necessary reference to the phantasm. This year we will examine the logic of the phantasm in terms of clinical transmission.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Seminars XIV, La logique du fantasme, 1966/67 and XV, Lacte psychanalytique, 1967/68.

✦ Pura Cancina will hold a Workshop on this topic on Saturday, May 14, 2011, from 10:30 AM–1:00 PM and 2:00 PM–4:00 PM, at the same location.

Guillermina Diaz

Saturday, September 25, 2010 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

By connecting the graph of desire with Lacan's Proposition of October 9, 1967, we will study the relation between analysis in intension and analysis in extension and reconsider Lacan's categories of Analyste de l'École and Analyste Membre de l'École in relation to the formation of the analyst.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan, Écrits: "The Subversion of the Subject and the Dialectic of Desire," 1960; "La proposition du 9 octobre 1967 sur le psychanalyste de l'École," first version, Ornicar, No. 1.

MEETING PLACE: The meeting will take place at the School of Visual Arts, 14 East 21st Street, New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

REGISTRATION: Attendance is free for members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Workshop attendance for others is $50; for students with ID, $20.

Psychoanalytic Act, Passe, Nomination

Paola Mieli

Saturday, January 8, 2011 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

This workshop will serve as an introduction to Lacan's invention of la passe, as a procedure which marks the passage from analysand to analyst and leads to a nomination. Paying close attention to some aspects of Lacan's writings devoted to it, we will reflect on the novelty of his proposal, the context in which it occurred, its goal, the outcome of its implementation, and its significance in today's considerations on the analytic act and its transmission.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Autres écrits, 2001: "La proposition du 9 octobre 1967 sur le psychanalyste de l'École"; "Discours de Lacan à l'E.F.P.," December 6, 1967; "Sur l'expérience de la passe, et de sa transmission," November 3, 1973; "Note italienne," 1973.

MEETING PLACE: The meeting will take place at the School of Visual Arts, 214 East 21st Street, New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

REGISTRATION: Attendance is free for members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Workshop attendance for others is $50; for students with ID, $20.

Alienation, Separation, Repetition

Jean-Michel Vappereau

Saturday, March 26, 2011 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

Sunday, March 27, 2011 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

In Beyond the Pleasure Principle (1920), Freud addresses the challenge to his original theory of wish-fulfillment posed by the existence of angst dreams. He thus reveals a new problematic in repetition. In homage to Lacan, we will study alienation and separation, and the function of the point in the phantasm that leads to a new understanding of repetition.

SUGGESTED READINGS: S. Freud: Beyond the Pleasure Principle, 1920.

MEETING PLACE: The meetings will take place at the School of Visual Arts, 214 East 21st Street, New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

REGISTRATION: Attendance is free for members of Après-Coup as well as for the faculty and students of the School of Visual Arts. Workshop attendance for others is $75 ($50 per session); for students with ID, $50 ($25 per session).

The Analytic Act

Isidoro Vegh

Friday, June 17, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Why ‘act’ and not ‘process’? Is there an act outside of analysis? What specifically qualifies the act as ‘analytical’? The analytic cure proceeds by way of a Freudian reason that questions Cartesian reason: “I think where I am not, I am where I do not think.” By entering into this logic, the analyst can find freedom in his interventions, reducing the risk of losing his bearings when what spurs him on is the end of an analysis.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Seminar XV, Lacte psychanalytique, 1967/68.

MEETING PLACE: The meeting will take place at the School of Visual Arts, 214 East 21st Street, New York City. Please ask at the front desk for the room number.

Trauma in Child Analysis

Catherine Vanier Mathelin

Friday, April 15, 2011 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Trauma is a much-used term today; does it still have the meaning Freud gave it? What does child analysis teach us about trauma? With Freud and Lacan as guides, we will try to identify the role trauma plays in forming infantile neurosis.

The Psychoanalysis of Children: Specificities of Practice

Alba Flesler

Saturday, June 18, 2011 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

In analytic practice with children the times of the subject are a guide for addressing the real presence of the parents in the transference as well as the vicissitudes of the drive and the jouissance in the child's play. The uniqueness of the analytic act and the singularity of each case will be underlined.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Seminar XXII, R.S.I., 1974/75. Alba Flesler: El niño en análisis y el lugar de los padres, 2007.

Jean-Michel Rabaté

Friday, November 12, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

Samuel Beckett consistently challenges the notion of what it means to be human; one of his strategies is to think via animals: hence the famous “Think, pig!” of Waiting for Godot. I will situate Beckett’s problematization of the human and the animal in relation to four thinkers: Derrida, Agamben, Lacan, and Bion.

Daniel Heller-Roazen

Friday, December 3, 2010 · 6:30 PM–9:00 PM

A Working Weekend with Colleagues from La lettre lacanienne

Analytic Act, Passe, Transmission

Saturday, February 19, 2011 · 10:30 AM–1:00 PM; 2:00 PM–4:30 PM

Sunday, February 20, 2011 · 10:30 AM–2:00 PM

PRESENTATIONS BY: Sophie Auouillé, Yann Diener, Edit Mac Clay, Sophie Mendelsohn, Paola Mieli, Ona Nierenberg, Erik Porge, and Martin Winn

By introducing the passe, Lacan introduced the possibility of questioning, in the very time in which it is produced, the analytic act and the passage from the analysand to the analyst. Here he saw the possibility for psychoanalytic institutes to be constituted other than in the prevailing hierarchical manner.

More than forty years later, the passe remains a vital procedure which, beyond the institutional variables of its arrangements, sustains the questioning of the specificity of the analytic act.

Such a questioning is a valuable support for differentiating psychoanalytic practice from that of the psychotherapies and for resisting a pervasive psychologism, from which psychoanalysts themselves are not immune.

SUGGESTED READINGS: J. Lacan: Écrits: “Seminar on ‘The Purloined Letter’” and “The Freudian Thing,” 1955; “The Situation of Psychoanalysis and the Training of Psychoanalysts in 1956”; Autres écrits, 2001: “Lacte de fondation de l’EFP en 1964,” “La Proposition du 9 octobre 1967.” Erik Porge: Transmettre la clinique psychanalytique, 2005.

Act and Transmission: On Formation in Psychoanalysis

Hosted by the Philosophy Department of the New School for Social Research

In the English-speaking tradition, the becoming of an analyst has been referred as the training of an analyst. The notion of “training” reveals a misunderstanding of the trajectory proper to the formation of the analyst, which affects both the clinical act and its transmission. “Training” suggests an apprenticeship in knowledge, conceived of as a set of procedures to develop a practical expertise. It does not reflect the specificity of the analytic act, which implies the passage through a novel experience that prompts a subjective transformation and the possibility of assuming a new ethical position. The notion of “formation,” from the Latin formare (to give form to), is more consistent with the uniqueness of such an act, since “formation” is the act of creating or causing to exist.

Since Après-Coup introduced the signifier “formation” into the English-speaking psychoanalytic milieu, many colleagues and associations in it have begun to adopt the term. To reflect on it in this international encounter is an opportunity to sustain essential aspects of psychoanalytic ethics, its difference and its transmission.

Psychoanalysts from Europe, South America, and the United States will come to this Colloquium to explore the specificity of analytic formation, addressing the formations of the unconscious, the analyst’s path, the psychoanalytic act, the transformation and the passage to a different subjective position—underlining the fundamental question of transmission in psychoanalysis.

How can we think about formation today, in our current cultural situation, characterized by, among other things, the dissemination of institutionalized normative training and the intrusion of the legal domain into the field of psychoanalysis?

The question of formation calls into play the significance of the following opposition: the normative and the particular versus the universal and the singular. How today can we further our thinking about the relation between singularity and universality?

Après-Coup Psychoanalytic Association will host colleagues from: Corpo Freudiano, Rio de Janeiro (Brazil); the Escuela Freudiana de Buenos Aires (Argentina); the Escuela de psicoanálisis Sigmund Freud–Rosario (Argentina); Espace Analytique (France); Insistance (France); Le Cercle Freudien (France); Nodi freudiani (Italy); and the Seminario psicoanalítico de Tucumán (Argentina).

The colloquium is the second public encounter of an ongoing Convergencia International Working Group, which is studying the topic: What can we expect from a psychoanalysis? (see <http://www.Insistance.org>)

Après-Coup Psychoanalytic Association gratefully acknowledges the cooperation for this event of the Philosophy Department of The New School for Social Research.
